MARKET COMMENTARY:

Severe winter, shortage of vessels in certain routes, scrapping of single hull tankers and increase in floating storage kept the crude tanker rates firm. But on the product tankers side, less demand especially from the western countries coupled with huge supply overhang resulted in weak charter rates.

Steady consumption of raw materials by China helped in keeping the dry bulk rates firm throughout the quarter. This, supported by port congestion in Australia and China kept the supply side tight. Scrapping activity also slowed during this period due to the strengthening of charter rates.

Significant slippages in vessel deliveries helped keep a lid on oversupply of both tankers and dry bulk vessels.

OUTLOOK:

Tanker Market:

As per IEA, world oil demand in 2010 is expected to improve to 86.6 mn barrels per day, which is about 2% higher than that seen in 2009. Specifically, demand from the non-OECD nations including the relatively fast-growing India and China, is expected to improve demand for tankers. In the medium to long term, significant refinery expansions in Middle East and Asia will provide a substantial trigger for product tanker demand due to increase in the ton-mile situation. But on the supply side, despite scrapping and slippages, strong fleet expansion will keep fleet utilization under pressure.

Dry Bulk Market:

Robust steel production and coal movement in China combined with recovery in world trade will see significant improvement in the dry bulk market. In addition, unusual weather patterns resulting in droughts could cause additional demand for movement of grain and steam coal in the short run. But going forward, it is expected that excessive fleet supply will gradually outpace the demand growth, keeping charter rates under pressure.

REVENUE VISIBILITY:

The revenue visibility for the balance part of FY 2010-11 is around Rs.700 crores. Crude tankers and product carriers (incl Gas carrier) are covered to the extent of around 42% and 69% of their operating days respectively. In case of dry bulk carriers, they are covered to the extent of around 53% of the fleet's operating days.
